

Nanking

In 1937, the Japanese invaded Nanking, China, and a terrible holocaust began. But amidst the depraved brutality, and terrible suffering, one unexpected heroine emerged: Minnie Vautrin, an American teacher and missionary who helped to found Chinas Ginling Girls College. There, in that college meant for 300 women, Vautrin risked her life to protect and shelter ten thousand girls from the horrors of the cruel and devastating Nanking invasion. Nanking is a story rich in human drama. Vautrins friend, Yen Hsu, Chiang Kai Cheks leading diplomat, was not Vautrins to love, but his daughters found their way to her during their greatest struggle, and she ensured their survival. But Vautrin was forever haunted by what she had seen, and she took her own life on May 16, 1941. Nevertheless, her legacy of hope, courage, and incredible bravery is sure to inspire the heroine-or hero-in all of us. And thanks to Kevin A. Kents brilliant novel, its ours to experience in these pages, as well.
