

The Complete Herbalist: Or the People Their Own Physicians By the Use of Natures Remedies; Describing the Great Curative Properties Found in the Herbal Kingdom (Classic Reprint)

In presenting this work on Crude Organic Remedies the Constituents of Plants, and their Official Preparations I do not propose to run a tilt against any of the systems of Medical Practice, however much some of them may be opposed to common sense and reason, and to the divine ordinances of Nature ;nor shall I treat with contempt the teachings and practices of great and wonderful names, or oppose the pride, interest, expectation, and conscientious convictions of a learned, honorable, and influential profession; my object is simply to present many new and curious, if not startling facts, not only well worthy of the earnest consideration of the more intelligent portion of the community, who demand reasons the most profound to lead them to conviction of a Truth, but of the great mass of humbler people, who desire, amid all the great Reforms in human society, above all things to secure a sound mind in a sound body, and to feel something of that exalted state of happiness which alone can arise from the possession of the most robust and ruddy physical and moral Health. It must be palpable to every thinking mind that Therapeutical and Pharmaceutical science is the very foundation of the Healing Art Divine. In the language of Holy Writ, The Lord has created medicines out of the earthy and he that is wise will not abhor them. Yea, happy he that can the knowledge gain, To know the Eternal God made naught in vain. The use of medicine is no doubt coincident with the History of the Human Race ;but writers generally agree that medicine first became a profession among the Egyptians.
