

How to Get Your Child Off The Couch And Make Something Of His Life

In a time of prolonged adolescence, young adults are not stepping into self-reliant adulthood. Parents are scratching their heads and don't know what to do. Speaking from her experience of launching two young adult children, Theresa Froehlich shares some valuable lessons to empower parents whose adult children seem to perpetuate adolescence. With candor and insight, she walks shoulder to shoulder with parents who want to see their children move forward in life.
